

RON HANDEL

I started my career in education in 1988 at my alma mater, Lodi High School, as an English teacher. After teaching for five years, I began a career as a school administrator. After spending 20 years as a school administrator travelling all over the world, an opportunity presented itself to work in independent study back in my hometown of Lodi. For the past several years I have discovered a new and rewarding career teaching independent study.

I have been married for 32 years and I have two grown adult children. My daughter is a manager of a store called Athleta down in the Los Angeles area, and my son works in Seattle for the video game Minecraft.